All those who are interested in the plans and purpose of this first Kindergarten Settlement, are earnestly requested to become members of the Elizabeth Peabody House Association. The work already has the support and indorsement of many of the best citizens of Boston and vicinity.

The members contribute annually three dollars and upward toward meeting the expenses of the Settlement. They receive all reports, and are welcomed at any time to the House.

Special donations are now needed to widen the circle of helpfulness. Remittances may be sent either to the Treasurer or to the Head of the House.

FIRST

ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

ELIZABETH PEABODY HOUSE,

156 CHAMBERS STREET, BOSTON.

BOSTON:

FRANK WOOD, PRINTER, 352 WASHINGTON STREET.

1896.

Elizabeth Peabody House.

Elizabeth Peabody House is a Kindergarten Settlement, similar in plan to the College Settlements, but centering its neighborhood influence in a Kindergarten to be conducted after the best attainable model.

The House is peculiarly situated, almost ideally so for the need of the work. Chambers Street is a busy thoroughfare, running from the Charlesbank through a region shut in by the Union Station, Massachusetts General Hospital, and the Charles River. The street swarms with little children, only partly cared for by the public schools. The houses, not many years ago, were owned by the well-to-do people of Boston. Even now the majority of the houses do not flaunt their poverty, wickedness, and misery. The population is entirely a foreign one of Italians, Russian Jews, and the remnants of an Irish population which is fast passing on.

While we stand alone in our own peculiar work in this district, we are so fortunate as to be in close communication and in relations of mutual interest and ready response with such established work as the Associated Charities on Chardon Street, the well equipped and helpful work of St. Andrew's Parish House, at the farther end of our street, and the three hospitals near by.

The House was opened, most appropriately, on the anniversary of Froebel's birthday, April 21, 1896. His own words might serve as a motto for the work: "Come, let us live with our children."

The House is attractively arranged and furnished,—a substantial four-story brick house in the midst of other homes. Means for the equipment of the House and the furnishing for the different rooms have been contributed by interested friends. On the first floor are the reception room, dining room, and kitchen. The second floor is thrown into one room for the kindergarten. These rooms are used in the evening and afternoon as clubrooms for the older boys and girls, mothers' meetings, and social gatherings. A fine piano, pictures, and the nucleus of a good library for the older children are features of the room which greatly aid in the general work. There is a pedagogical library in the room below which is a help and stimulus to the workers in the House, furnishing them with reference books and material for special lines of study. The two upper floors are furnished attractively in a simple, homelike manner for the resident workers who form the family group, the head worker, kindergartner, and four normal students.

The students in the House are from different parts of the country, and come to study in the kindergarten training classes of Boston. They give their mornings to the practical working out of their study. With this family group are connected a number of efficient associate workers who help to carry on the plans of work in the reading room, clubs, circulating picture gallery, physical culture classes, and socials.

The first point of contact between the neighborhood and the House was with the little children; the long "waiting list" of the neighborhood public schools furnishing immediate access to a suitable constituency.

The demand for admission to the new Kindergarten far outran the room capacity within the first week, the number being limited to thirty. The Kindergarten has kept its doors open all through the summer months. Outings in the parks and country and a regular flower distribution were special features of the summer work. The children have become noticeably responsive to the work, and show the effect not only in the Kindergarten, but in their own homes. The every-day contact in the House with the children, naturally brought the parents of the children into the home life at the House. At first when they came in they were curious and suspicious; but the mutual interest felt in the children, and the neighborhood relationship which soon sprang up, brought the mothers and many of the fathers to look upon the residents as friends. The Kindergarten, during the morning hours, became a natural dropping-in place—for a few minutes' talk, consultation, and even rest. Our opening a hospitable door met with more ready response than we dared hope for. The first social for the mothers of the children who had come to us brought to the House twenty-five neighbors for an evening of friendly intercourse, music, and entertainment. Out of this gathering at the very beginning of the Settlement's work came some active efforts, in the way of co-operation between the residents and neighbors, toward removing some of the worst abuses of the neighborhood.

Elizabeth Peabody House is a home open to all who come within its influence and for those who live within its four walls. It aims to come in close contact, and be identified, with every neighborhood interest that may affect the welfare of the people of the district in which we are living.

In this way we hope to secure the best results that can come from the union of such principles as those of the Kindergarten and the Settlement.
